

Linda Kaye Hollingsworth-Jones is always looking for what's most honoring, respectful and kind for the horse. In her quest to exhibit her pride in her equine pupils she has amassed a wide variety of titles including PtHA World and Reserve World Champion in Dressage, PtHA World Show Top Ten in Working Hunter, Hunter Hack and Working Cowhorse. AQHA Regional Experience Champion Green Working Hunter. USDF (United States Dressage Federation) Rider awards in Training, First and Second Levels, multiple USDF Regional Championship Qualifiers and All Breed Award Winners, Arabian Horse Association Horse In Hand & Dressage. Cowboy Dressage World Gathering Class Winner and multiple Top 5 placings on three horses. At the center of these diverse disciplines you will always find the horse and her drive to teach them in the clearest, most efficient way possible while maintaining mental clarity and physical suppleness. In continuing to pursue this goal, she is in the first class of teachers in training in the Ecole de Legerete in the United States. This ancient methodology is based in the teaching of the very first pupils through the ages. Not surprisingly, Linda chose this method because of the clarity of the teaching and the well-being of the horse being the central throughout. She began her studies in 2013 and will be sitting for her exams to be a licensed instructor this year.

This is a wonderful opportunity to find out if this is a discipline for you! No experience necessary, but a controllable horse is.
